

Standalone Training Venues Update | March 2023

Following a careful review of usage data of standalone training venues at recent editions of the Olympic Games (e.g., London 2012, Rio 2016 and Tokyo 2020) as well as analysis of NOC arrival patterns, it has been agreed that the following principles will be implemented in regard to dates of operation:

- The training period for athletes will commence in general seven (7) days prior to the first day of competition for the relevant sport/discipline.
- At the earliest, the training period will start on 18 July 2024, when the Olympic Village opens.
- At the latest, the training period will commence on day 1 of the Olympic Games.
- However, on a case-by-case basis, including analysis of usage data and fair access to venues, and in agreement with the relevant International Federation (IF), some disciplines have set specific rules for the training period, either reducing or increasing the amount of days.

On a case-by-case basis, including analysis of usage data and fair access to venues, and in agreement with the relevant International Federation (IF), some disciplines have set specific rules for the training period.
